Back to Nature by Aviarius

Bird watching has become one of the fastest growing hobbies in the United States and around the world. It's estimated that 60 million people feed, house and watch birds in the US alone, coming in second to the most popular hobby, gardening. Backyard bird watching and feeding is enjoyed by all ages and helps children to gain knowledge about nature. This relaxing hobby is also inexpensive and aids nature by providing secondary food sources, especially in the winter months. We hope this selection of feeders aids your children on their education with nature and provides for endless enjoyment observing our flying friends.
